Activation Code I assume that Panasonic's model names for its laptops are always going to be very generic like "CF-52", "CF-53" etc. Those of us who buy them from the retail outlets will know these, but the target audience of a laptop review site is the technically-minded. The CF-52 is a rather bargain-basement sub-compact, with an Intel Celeron M 450 for $500, 2 gigabytes of memory and 64 GB of hard drive space. There is no optical drive. It is 12.0 inches long and 6.1 inches wide, and weighs under 3 pounds. It is about half the size of a 13-inch MacBook Air and costs almost one-third the price.
There are other differences, too. The display is a 10-point touch screen, and the backlit keyboard has no separate number keys. The built-in speakers generate very little sound. The tough build gives it a solid and sturdy feel, with a textured back which makes it easy to hold and carry. It has an integrated DVD-RW optical drive, a palm rest, two USB ports, an Ethernet port, an audio jack, a power button, a sleep button, and a reset button. The battery life is 5 hours. The CF-52 has an Intel Celeron M 450 processor running at 1 GHz, 2 gigabytes of memory and 64 gigabytes of hard drive space. There is a 300 gigabyte hard drive, and you can add an extra 64 gigabytes of memory or hard drive space for a total of 544 gigabytes. The screen measures 10.4
